FIND 547 CHILDREN AT MORRISVILLE NORMAL

Medical Examination of Students Show 800 Have Remedial Defects

EXAMINE 1347 IN ALL

MORRISVILLE, July 9.—Dr. George A. Enion, school medical director, in his annual report shows that out of 1347 pupils of the local schools examined 547 of them were found normal and were not reported for treatment. Eight hundred children had remedial defects and treatment was advised to correct these defects.

The report also shows 199 pupils were ten per cent. underweight and all were treated; 85 had defective vision and 60 were treated. There were 87 with unclean teeth, with 60 treated; 331 with decayed teeth, 62 with irregular teeth; 233 with diseased or enlarged tonsils with 54 treated; 40 children were excluded because of the German measles, one for whooping cough, four for pink eye, six for tonsillitis, five for impetigo, 32 for non-contagious skin disease.

There were 11 children with orthopedic deformities and three were treated; three abnormally nervous, all treated; two with epilepsy, all treated; 18 with defective speech, one with asthma, two with organic heart.

The report stated that all candidates for the athletic teams were examined and passed on before being permitted to participate in competitive games. There were 150 pupils who received treatment for accidents and sickness at the school or the office of the medical director. There were 40 pupils reported who had contagious diseases.

The director reported that the school playgrounds were not in good condition. At Manor Park there are too many stones on the ground and the bank is washing away. At Capitol View school an open ditch runs back of the building and at the Robert Morris and William Case buildings the grounds are very dusty in dry weather and muddy in wet weather.

For the eighth time the restaurant of J. Milnor Wildman, of West Bridge street, commander of the American Legion here, has been broken into and robbed. Last night entrance was gained by breaking out a glass window on the side of the building and then raising the sash. $20 in cash, which had been hidden by the night clerk when he closed, was stolen. Nothing else was molested. On every occasion the night's receipts were stolen.

Committees have been appointed to make arrangements for an outing for the Morrisville Roosevelt Democratic Club, July 25, in Smith's woods on the Upper Ferry Road.

Mr. and Mrs. John Adams, of 41 Harrison avenue, are the parents of a daughter, born June 29th.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Capitol View Fire Company will hold a covered dish supper on the lawn of Mrs. Robert Margerum, Hillside avenue, Wednesday evening at six o'clock.

SHRINKING INCOMES

(The Commercial Bulletin, Boston, June 29, 1935)

Corporations are taking advantage of the prevailing low rates of interest to refund their debts by the issue of new bonds at lower rates of interest. Cities with good credit are borrowing money at rates unprecedented in their experience. The City of Worcester, Massachusetts, has recently sold an issue of bonds, and the bonds are now offered for sale to the public by bankers. The bonds have maturities from 1 to 20 years and the prices vary according to date of maturity of each bond. The highest yield is for bonds maturing from 1951 to 1955, but they return only 2 per cent. For bonds maturing July 1, 1936, the yield is but 3 tenths of 1 per cent for the year.

In these days of depression it is a great help to federal and local governments to be able to borrow money at low rates of interest, but there are certain classes of citizens who are harmed, not helped, by the lower interest rates. Savings banks are by law restricted in their investments to mortgages, municipal bonds, and other securities that are considered especially sound. When interest rates on such securities go down, the income of the savings banks goes down, and depositors get less income from their deposits.

A large part of the trust funds that support hospitals, churches, and charitable institutions is invested in bonds, and when interest rates drop the institutions suffer a reduction of income. When a 5 per cent bond is replaced by a new bond paying 4 per cent, the owner suffers a loss of 20 per cent of his income on that bond.

Societies and charitable institutions are by no means the only sufferers from reduction of interest rates. Trustees acting for widows and orphans follow the rule of safety first in handling trust funds. When the income return on an estate drops from 4½% to 3½%, it may not cause much inconvenience to a wealthy family; but to thousands of elderly people of small means such a shrinkage of income is almost a calamity.

GERMANY BELIEVES RESISTANCE OF HOME FOLK TO DECIDE WAR, TRAINS WHOLE POPULATION

President of Reich Air Defense League Tells Aims In Exclusive Interview

The president of Germany's mammoth air defense league gives an inkling of what all large cities in belligerent countries may expect in time of war, in an interview which is the fifth of a series of dispatches from European capitals on "When War Comes." Previous articles have dealt with Paris. Subsequent dispatches will come from London and Moscow.

BERLIN, July 9.—(INS)—"In future wars, air attacks will play an eminent role not only for the fighting army, but for everybody. Therefore, an entirely new system of preparation for the people is strictly necessary," Lieut.-Gen. Hugo Grimme, president of the Reich Air Defense League in charge of the entire passive air defense of Germany, told me in an interview.

"The aim of such an education must be that every individual of a nation, men and women, old and young, must have an outspoken sense for their duty to participate in the defense of their country and learn in peacetime what is necessary for this defense.

"Two things are necessary for this purpose; every citizen must have or get by proper education the moral qualities to courageously resist the enemy forces, and to learn practically how to meet the dangers of the air, i. e., bomb attacks. Only if every individual has all that moral and practical experience can be voided what has played such a fearful role not only for Germany at the end of the world war but also for other nations during history: a panic.

"Created in a small territory, a panic spread within a surprisingly short time to other parts of the war territory and beyond that soon got a whole nation in its grips. In future, the battlefields of air wars will be everywhere, affecting not only the fighting armies but also the home countries of the warring nations, where havoc will be cre-

Charles Roebuck Held For Next Term of County Court

Charles Roebuck, Croydon, was held in $500 bail for court last night by Justice of Peace James Guy in the Municipal Building here.

Roebuck was arrested by Highway Patrolman Hand and charged with operating a motor vehicle after his license had recently been revoked for physical reasons.

Roebuck had had his license revoked and had been so advised by the State and also by Patrolman Hand on two different occasions. Hand caught him again and placed him under arrest.

Roebuck claimed that he drove the car to a prospective purchaser as he desired to sell the car because his license had been revoked.

FLOOD FOLLOWERS
LOSE IN BY-LAW VOTE

Those Adopted at Special Meeting Thrown Into Scrap Basket

OLD ONES ARE RETAINED

CHALFONT, July 9.—At a meeting of the Bucks County Democratic Committee held here last night, a severe setback was administered to Dr. John A. Flood, county chairman, when the new by-laws which were passed at his instigation at a special meeting held July 2nd at New Hope, were thrown into the political scrap-basket, and the old by-laws were retained.

The new by-laws which are said to have been the handiwork of Dr. Flood, and which the anti-Flood faction claims were adopted at a packed convention, July 2nd, had since been ruled illegal, due to the fact that on the call of the special meeting it was not stated what the nature of the business was to be transacted at the special gathering.

Dr. Flood did not put in an appearance at the meeting last night, and this threw the burden of conducting the session upon the shoulders of Mrs. Flood.

Re-elect James McGee As Grand Knight of K. of C.

At the annual election of officers for the ensuing year, which was held last night at the Knights of Columbus home, James L. McGee was re-elected as grand knight of the Bristol Council for the 1935-1936 fiscal year.

Other officers elected are: Deputy grand knight, Warren Armstrong; chancellor, Joseph Murphy; advocate, William J. Slater; recorder, John R. Bard; trustee, Edward J. O'Donnell; warden, Robert McCurry; inside guard, Joseph Ward; outside guard, Joseph Clardy; financial secretary, Paul J. Barrett; trustees, Neil McIlvaine and William Elmer.

Plans were made for the annual outing to be held Sunday, July 21st, at the council home, and from all indications this promises to be a huge success. The committee in charge has arranged a series of events, and the day promises a good time for everyone attending.

Conducting Intensive Drive
For Members of Association

With nearly all communities of the valley having their campaign committee well organized, the membership drive for the Delaware Valley Protective Association started July 1.

No official returns of the results have been obtained as yet but several "check-ups" on various places have given an encouraging forecast.

Several districts thinly represented by membership in the last two years have already reached a membership number equal to the well represented sections of last year.

One chairman reported that "The results of the association in getting favorable action for the Pennsylvania Canal and its assistance with others for the River Drive on the Jersey side were largely responsible for the fine support my community will make."

The several sections not yet organized are expected to be so during the week and are ready to make a good showing at the first report meeting to be held this week.

The association aims for 1500 members this year. This will be a healthy growth and with this increased membership and enthusiasm it seems certain the ultimate aims of the association to Preserve the Beauty and Value of the valley will be achieved.

"Valley Forge, Washington Crossing Park, even our own Canal, are monuments of what can be done when people get together and strive for something," said William J. Stover, secretary of the association and its drive co-ordinator. "This same spirit of co-operation can preserve the beauty and value of the valley as a whole. The more of us that believe it, act it and work for it, the sooner this desire will be realized."

CORRECTION

The story regarding induction of a new treasurer for the Bensalem Township school board, appearing in yesterday's Courier was correct. New treasurer took office, namely L. H. Reichert, succeeding L. L. Williams, and not a new secretary as mentioned in the heading of the story.

COUNCIL DECIDES
NOT TO DEMOLISH
OLD BOROUGH HALL

Expense of $300 Not To Be Incurred at This Time, It Is Decided

RENAME MR. MORRIS

Second Ward Councilman Is Reappointed as Member of of Navigation Board

Borough Council last night considered the demolishing of the old town hall and the rebuilding of that portion of Market street which the building occupies, too expensive a proposition to undertake at this time. It was estimated that the total cost would be about $300.

Clarence W. Winter, chairman of finance and public property committee, reported to council that the committee had procured two bids for razing the building. "Each of the bidders wanted $100," stated Mr. Winter. "The borough engineer estimates that it would cost at least $200 to rebuild that portion of Market street which the building occupies."

Continuing Mr. Winter stated that the committee considered it unwise to contract any additional financial burden at this time.

Council approved the report of the committee.

Armand V. Morris was renamed to the Board of Commissioners for the Delaware River and its Navigable Tributaries, for four years.

Police committee reported officers made eight arrests during June and that the cases had been disposed of in the following manner: One held for court, three, fined; two committed to jail; and two discharged. Forty-four lodgers were given shelter; seven are and 19 small lights were reported out during the month.

Chief of Police Jones turned over to council $2 as receipts from permits for Sunday baseball games.

Meeting was called to order by William J. Lefferts, secretary, who stated that Dr. J. Fred Wagner, president, had advised him that he would be unable to attend the meeting. Mr. Lefferts asked for nominations for a president pro tem. Jacob C. Schmidt, Sr., was named to preside over the meeting.

Councilmen absent were Wagner, Warner, Vandegrift, Spezzano, Howard.

QUIT WORRYING

So it turns out that the Middle West is not going to be a desert, and not in the immediate future at least will travelers be marveling at mounds heaped above the sites of Kansas City and St. Louis. There was talk like that a year ago when the dust storms were scattering Colorado soil in the eyes of Kansas wheat farmers. But this spring it has been raining—in some places all too much, and floods have taken the place of sand storms at the job of inspiring fear. All this has happened in less than a year, and now equally confident so-called scientific forecasters are saying that North America is not in danger of developing deserts like those of western Asia and northern Africa.

The reason is that Kansas and Nebraska and the Dakotas are on a continent that reaches up to the Arctic snow cap and that refrigeration tempers the winds and insures the continued services of Medicine Hat as a promoter of good-old-fashioned periodic rains.

All of which seems to prove that certain prophets who capitalize a reputation for scientific knowledge are too prone to jump to conclusions.

Great regional shifts of climate and rainfall do not take place overnight or in a year. The civilizations whose traces now are the mounds and bits of broken pottery in the deserts of Asia and Africa, held sway for multiplied centuries longer than the brief span of time during which white men have known anything about North America.

POSTALIZED RAIL FARES

Very few ideas for saving the railroads are likely to have such an appeal to popular imagination as the suggestion, gratuitously advanced by a New Yorker and under consideration by Co-ordinator Eastman, that passenger fares be postalized.

That means simply that for a flat-rate charge—suggested as $3 for express trains and $1 for locals—you could buy a ride to any point on the line. Train-riding would be placed on the same basis as street car riding.

The idea does have, as Mr. Eastman said in all seriousness, wide possibilities. Provided the flat fare should be set low enough, we can imagine no step the railroads might take that would serve so surely to retrieve for them the passenger traffic they have lost in the last decade or so to the private automobile. Whether it could be retrieved profitably by this method is something else.

The theory of the flat-rate fare is, of course, that it costs the lines just as much to haul a passenger car nearly empty as it does to haul the same car full to the doors. However that may be, the trick in applying the theory would seem to involve an obvious actuarial problem. If the fare were placed too high, it naturally would not affect traffic volume at all. On the other hand, if it were placed too low, the possibility readily may be envisaged of the railroads running headlong into bankruptcy in the effort to provide enough cars to accommodate the crowds.

Germany Believes Resistance of Home Folk to Decide War, Trains the Whole Population

pate in the first part of the air defense education of the nation. Press and radio will use their influence on the masses to make them air defense-minded. The second part, finally, has been entrusted in Germany to the Reich Air Defense League.

"The League since its foundation two years ago has made great progress in educating and training the German nation in air defense measures. The League is counting nearly 6,000,000 members today. The organization is maintaining 2,200 schools wherein the population is being taught by 280,000 unpaid League teachers how to behave in enemy air raids, construct provisional shelters, fight bombs caused by incendiary bombs, etc.

"More than 2,200,000 citizens have gone through these schools. Air-defense committees have been organized in 21,500 cities and towns all over Germany. In the big cities, 1,000,000 capable and specially trained men will take charge of their respective apartment houses as 'house air-defense commanders' and give warnings to their fellow citizens whenever enemy planes should approach, see that everybody reaches the bomb and gas-proof shelters in time and direct the first measures against fires. These figures will prove what an enormous amount of work has been done, but also that there still remains a lot more to be done, because the air defense training should comprise the entire nation.

"When the psychological education of the nation is completed and will finally also stand the test, the psychological factor will be backing up the leaders of the country's fighting forces on land, sea and air, and

by CLADYS SHAW ERSKINE and IVAN FIRTH

CHAPTER XLII

Cyrus K. Mantel, still chuckling like a benevolent gnome, walked swiftly to his waiting car and was driven home.

He went immediately to his library and, sitting at the big desk, drew the leather-bound book, without title or any sort of mark, toward him.

He unlocked it and laid it open before him, at the page marked "Solution," and wrote:

"The chip of brick and mortar broken from the wall of Vane's greenhouse, beyond reach, suggested to me that the body could have been slung onto the roof from the building in process of erection.

Assuming that the body was not that of Isobel Vane, it was reasonable to suppose that Isobel herself had left the apartment by the fire escape.

The fact that her jewels were gone, but that there were no signs of burglary, and that her bed was undisturbed further strengthened my theory of voluntary flight.

The finger prints on veronal bottle not checking with Vane's or those of the body, might easily, therefore, be those of the missing wife.

I discovered that among Isobel's many lovers was Roger Thornley.

I also discovered that he was the contractor on the building next door, having access to it at any time.

I went through this building and found a derrick operating within reach of the Vane terrace.

Having noticed the birthmark on the dead body which caused the mother to identify it, caused me to think that no woman who lived by the beauty of her body would have permitted this blemish to remain long on hers. I therefore found the plastic surgeon and discovered that my deductions were correct, and that he had indeed removed such a blemish from the body of Isobel Vane, and therefore, it was certain that the body was that of an unknown woman.

Who, wishing to elope with the beautiful Isobel would be prevented from so doing by the tie of another woman?

The only one was Roger Thornley. Upon investigation he was shown to have left by motor with his wife Millie for the West Coast two days before the murder.

Old Suky, starting voodoo magic against some unknown man, was well worth watching.

It was easy to deduce that the man she hated was Roger Thornley because of his abuse of Millie whom the old woman loved.

The chemist in Greenwich Village could not identify Vane, but only knew that the man who purchased the veronal said he was Vane.

In the same way, a man's voice announcing the murder had said he was Renton, but there was no proof that it was Renton, and later plenty of proof that it was not. This would argue that someone had plotted the elopement and the murder with care.

There were two women missing in whom I was interested. One of them was dead.

They were Isobel Vane and Millie Thornley.

The post cards that kept arriving from Millie Thornley were difficult to account for.

The murder of Donetta Dane, its similarity to the first murder, saving for the presence of the head, and the presence of Roger Thornley, with his inimical attitude toward Vane, strengthened my suspicion of him.

Betty's report of the whispered conversations overheard in the hall, and Thornley's threat because of Donetta's knowledge of some move of Gerry Gordon's, made me send for the list of women sailing on the Tanyo Kishon Kaisha Line.

I had also found the shreds of a telegram in Thornley's room at Milbank Manor, with the name of this steamship line on it. And I was assured by everyone, including Betty, that Mrs. Roger Thornley had sailed on this line. I was also assured that Donetta had known that Gerry Gordon had sailed too, and that that was what had angered Thornley.

I found that Mrs. Thornley had sailed for China as indicated, but that no Gerry Gordon was listed.

What had happened to this other woman, who now seemed to have disappeared?

There were three women in whom I was interested. Two of whom had vanished. One was dead.

My job was to prove that the dead one was not Mrs. Isobel Vane.

I went to a radio station and arranged to use their radio and television facilities to broadcast the photographed head of Isobel Vane. At the same time I broadcast an appeal, offering a reward in case of that station for any information regarding the original of the pictured head I was showing.

Answers came from a young interne in Chicago on vacation.

He recognized the head as that of a woman picked up, injured and quite insane, wandering in the vicinity of San Jose, California. She had been sent to the State Asylum at Napa, where she now was.

I sent for him, talked with him and flew to California where I found Isobel Vane—insane. I brought her with a doctor and an attendant to New York in time to produce her as the corpse delict at the Vane trial.

Cyrus K. leaned back in his chair and studied the book before him. Then reaching forward, he lifted the phone and gave a number.

"Hello, Ingles!" he said. . . . "Thank you, I'm just as pleased as you are. He's a splendid chap. . . . Oh! my dear Ingles, you mustn't feel like that. Anyone might have thought as you did. It certainly looked bad for the boy. . . . Why, of course, he won't hold it against you. Didn't you do all you could to help him? . . . Yes, it is tragic for her, but that is all you can expect as an end for them, when the beginning is such as hers. I called you to tell you that I've just had a wire from the police at San Jose, California. They have found the head. . . . Yes. He apparently threw it into a ravine as he left town after beating Isobel. . . . He probably thought she was dead. . . . No customer. Oh, yes. He'll get what's coming to him. . . . What's that? Old Suky? Oh, she's sure that voodoo will take care of him, and I'm sure that justice will. You take care of this affair of the head, will you, Ingles? . . . Fine. I'll look forward to seeing you soon. . . . Yes. I hope so too. I'll be fine to be on another case together. The best of luck to you. Good-bye."

Again Cyrus K. took up his pen and wrote.

"The murder of Donetta Dane was due to fear of her knowledge—that she might inadvertently expose him. It was an attempt to hide his own trail and further implicate Vane.

The cards supposed to be sent by Millie could have easily been written and signed by her, on almost any excuse before the two left New York to be posted by Roger at correct intervals.

Donetta Dane was an innocent victim. The only thing she had to fear was a fetish of her own. She did not want her husband to know that she had ever posed in the nude for Lawrence Vane. That was the reason for her whispered request of him and his assurance of silence."

Again he leaned back and surveyed his work. He removed his glasses and stroked one eyebrow thoughtfully, then murmured to himself:

"I wish I could write in the most interesting part, to me—that not only have I been able to save an innocent man and bring a guilty one to justice, but I have been instrumental in bringing young hearts together. Life is very kind to us, sometimes, very kind."

He leaned forward, closed the book, snapped the lock, and placed the key on a separate hanger within a secret drawer in the desk.

Then he took out a rather book, identical with the one he had just locked. All the pages were blank.

He took out small brushes and embossing stamps and gold liquid. Carefully he drew on the cover of the book he had just locked, a small bottle, and a golden derrick.

He then laid the locked book aside, and drew the virgin, blank one toward him.

"I wonder . . ." he mused, "I wonder!"

"LEFTY" WHITAKER WEAKENS AND LOSES

After hurling shut-out ball for five innings, "Lefty" Whitaker weakened in the sixth to allow the Newport Road Men's Club to count four times and earn a close 4-3 victory over the Bristol Cases in a Bristol Twilight League tilt. By virtue of its win, the Newport team went into third place in the league standing for the first half.

Whitaker had really started to weaken in the fourth when he was fooled for a double and single and "Bill" Dougherty was charged with an error but he escaped scoring in this canto because "Lefty" Crossley took a chance on some daring base-running and was unsuccessful.

In the next session, Whitaker was picked for a quartet of tallies. Eastlack singled to center. Bartle bunted and by fast legging beat out the ball for a hit. Myers singled off Whitaker's glove. The Cases' south-paw bore down and fanned Ziegler. He seemed out of danger when Crossley hit back at him and Eastlack was dead at the plate. Hovatter hit to Dougherty who committed a very costly error by throwing wild to second, scoring Bartle and Myers. Muth then settled the issue with a two-bagger to right. Vandine was an easy out.

Hovatter and his mates received a big scare in the last bat of the Knights. Trailing 4-1, and one out, Paul Moore lifted an easy fly to center who Crossley should have basked easily but dropped the ball for an error. McDevitt reached out for a high pitch-out and nailed it to right for a single, Moore going to third. On the throw to third, McDevitt went to second and as a play was made there for him, Moore took a chance and sprinted to the plate and by a nice slide counted a run. Cooper filed out to Eastlack who wobbled but managed to hold on to the pill. Joe Dougherty continued his heavy clouting with a double to center, counting McDevitt. Cahall was hit on the arm with a fast pitch. "Bill" Dougherty watched a third strike whiz over the plate.

Joe Dougherty scored the first Cases' tally in the second when he singled, went to second on Crossley's error, advanced on a sacrifice, and counted when B. Dougherty skied to right. Joe almost scored another run in the fourth when he tripped to left-center but was out at the plate on a fast relay. Crossley to Swope to Bartle. Dougherty's batting was the feature of the game.

Seven Years Ago Today—

With "Mike" DeRisi on the mound, the St. Ann's team blanked the Leedom's nine, 2-0, on the Saints' diamond in a Bristol Twilight League contest. DeRisi white-washed the Mulhollanders with six bingles. "Ot" Brooks did the twirling for the losers and really deserved a better fate than accorded him. He allowed but three hits. In the first, Fields singled and Paletta doubled for a run; while Oriola's hit and an error by Harvey Cochrane paved the way for the second tally.

Shadows of the Past

By BURNLEY

Wilmer Allison, Jean Texan, and Sidney Wood, trail stylist from New York, are the two veterans upon whom the United States' Davis Cup hopes must rest until the younger set of American tennis talent develop to the point where they can make a creditable showing in Cup competition.

Whether Allison and Wood can even carry the U. S. team past the Interzone finals is at least doubtful; either the Czechs, with Roderick Menzel, or the Germans, with the great Baron von Cramm, figure to provide very dangerous opposition for the Americans. And even if Uncle Sam's net warriors reach the challenge round, it seems hardly within the realm of possibility that they can beat their old nemesis, Perry and Austin, in the singles.

For Allison and Wood have both had considerable Davis Cup experience, and neither has enjoyed any conspicuous success, to say the least. Allison has been a remarkably consistent loser in Cup singles, and it is hardly probable that he will flash a sudden reversal of form in the fading years of his tennis career. The sunburned Texan is an earnest and gritty competitor, but he seems to suffer from a losing complex abroad.

Sidney Wood has likewise failed to set the world on fire with his Davis Cup playing, though he has risen to the occasion better than Allison at times. Last year he played brilliantly in the Interzone finals against Australia, when he beat the famed Jack Crawford in a ding-dong battle, and also displayed some sparkling tennis in extending Fred Perry to the limit in the challenge round.

It looks as if the shadows of their past Davis Cup defeats will doom Allison and Wood in their efforts to regain the trophy this year.

YARDLEY PICKS

CADDY TEAM

TRENTON, N. J., July 9—The six caddies who will represent the Yardley Country Club in the second annual Trenton district caddy tournament that will be held Wednesday at the Longacres Country Club were announced last night by Al Macdonald, Yardley pro.

It is practically an all-Rupprecht contingent that will invade the Lawrence Road layout in an effort to bring the Times' Newspapers award to the Pennsylvania club. Four Rupprecht brothers—Frank, Paul, William and Charles—are on the squad which will be augmented by John Lukowitz and Wilbur Redman.

Thirty-six holes of medal play will be engaged in by the bag-toters. William Welschberger, of Springfield, the winner last year, will not defend his title. In addition to the Times prize—a wrist watch—other awards have been donated by the host club. The competitors will also be guests at a buffet luncheon between rounds.

A tournament will be held today at Longacres to determine which caddies shall represent the home club.

TO CONDUCT BOUTS AT TRENTON FAIR GROUNDS

TRENTON, July 9—Johnny Ipp, wrestling maestro has announced that he has leased the Trenton Fair Grounds for the presentation of wrestling and boxing matches for the summer outdoor season. Colonel Fred Margerum, general manager of the Trenton Fair and Ipp came to terms last week and Ipp set about preparing a show fitting the spacious and beautiful setting that the Fair Grounds grandstand will provide.

Two of matland's premier performers, both well known to central Jersey fandom will inaugurate the outdoor season, Tuesday evening, July 16. Gino Garibaldi, foremost Italian grappler, and Emil Dusek, ace villain of the local mat are to meet in the feature clash, two best falls out of three, 90 minute time limit. It is one of the most important bouts ever brought to this area.

Dusek's villainous and "off-color" tactics have been a source of annoyance to fans for the entire winter. His greatest feat was holding the redoubtable Jim Browning, former champion, to a 90 minute draw. He pinned Fred Grubmeir, Rube Wright, Jack Donovan, Abe Goldberg was disqualified against Everett Marshall and lost two decisions to Sandor Szabo and they were by grace of the referee favoring Szabo for his cleaner tactics. Emil's brawny shoulders were pinned only by Chief Little Wolf in a spectacular encounter.

Garibaldi appeared here twice during the winter season. He dunned Al Bisignano a feat accomplished only by little Wolf and O'Mahoney. In the final show of the indoor season Gino clamped his fearsome inside double toe-hold on Paul Boesch and made the popular Paul call it a night.

Ipp encountered much difficulty in pairing these two contenders but the opportunity of opening the Fair Grounds plus an extra percentage clinched the match.

About the best set of supporting bouts ever to precede a main event here has been carded. The semi-windup, 45 minute time limit, will bring together Bull Martin, Trenton grappler, who is now campaigning in these parts after a successful stay in New England and Canada. His opponent will be the youthful Jack Donovan, handsome Boston Irishman.

The ever popular Paul Boesch tangles with an erstwhile favorite, Al "Red Devil" Glecwicz in a special 30 minute bout. Abe Coleman, Hebrew star, makes his first appearance in this vicinity after a lapse of several years, against gigantic Floyd Marshall.

Governor Signs Bill

Harrisburg, July 9—Governor Geo. H. Earle today had signed the Ruth constitutional revision bill. As a result, Pennsylvania voters will cast ballots of September 17th on the question of whether or not they desire a constitutional convention to meet and revise the state's 61 year old basic law. If the referendum is favorable, 76 delegates will be elected at the November election.

Harrisburg, July 9—After functioning six years without changes in the personnel, the State Agency supervising 4100 paroled criminals has fallen under the administration's dismissal axe, it became known today. Fifteen of the original 26 parole officers have been "fired" in the drastic reorganization. Most of the agents dismissed had been connected with the system since its inception in 1930. In their places 22 new agents have been appointed by the Pardon Board through Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti.

NEW YORK STATE TRAFFIC OF ALL KINDS PARALYZED BY FLOOD

Flood Followers

Lose in By-Law Vote

Irvin James, who is the vice-chairman.

The old by-laws of the Democratic County Committee were amended at the session here last night, so that a stated number of county committee members may call a special meeting of the county committee. Without this amendment the by-laws provided that a special meeting could be called by the county chairman.

Webster Achey, Doylestown attorney, talked at length against the amendment before the vote on the amendment was taken, but the amendment carried by a majority of 12, the vote being 82 1/2 for, to 70 1/2 against.

A group of Flood followers who had been denied admittance to the meeting because of the fact that they were not members of the committee, crashed the gate and established a gallery. They were very orderly however, and only a small percentage of them attempted to create any disturbance. There were a few however, who during the address of Mr. Achey spurred him on to new heights of oratorical efforts by such remarks as "Tell it to them, 'Web'", "That-a-boy, 'Web'" and "Web's telling it to them now." All this was done however in a manner which could not be characterized as disorderly, and according to the anti-Flood contingent made their victory all the sweeter, the vote having been recorded in their favor after the address of the able attorney.

The anti-Flood group claim that Flood workers went among the committeemen and committee-women during the past few days, and used many arguments, mostly false it is contended, to gain their votes, and their arguments were effective in a number of cases. Many members of the committee were deceived, say Flood's opponents, and voted as they would not have done had they been treated fairly by the Flood workers.

William A. Fromhagen, Revere, who was named on June 21st by secretary of highways Warren VanDyke as superintendent of state highways in Bucks County, has received his summons to go to the 69th street district office of the Pennsylvania State Highway Department, and will assume his duties as county superintendent of highways within the next day or two.

Fromhagen received his luscious plum of the $3,000 job over the opposition of Flood and his supporters, who were backing John F. Smoyer, of Bristol, for the position.

It was stated here last night that at a meeting of the Democratic Club held in the Fountain House, Doylestown, previous to the session here, it was reported that Dr. Flood was going to resign at the meeting here, but neither Flood nor his resignation put in an appearance.
